

Crumbs Vol. VI (1251 to 1500)

Alfredo Llaquet-Alsina

Crumb 1251The Paradox of Female
Beauty and Ethnicity

I, one of the foremost experts in human female beauty, as it was previously established, will now explain The Paradox of Female Beauty and Ethnicity, which applies whatever the ethnicity of the speaker is. It goes, “Spanish women are the most beautiful in the world, and Korean women are the most beautiful in the world, and black women are the most beautiful in the world, and Indian women are the most beautiful in the world, and [every ethnicity follows].”

Crumb 1252The Honor of Being a Woman

The political left has taught the world lately three very enlightening truths. First, men are very bad people whose secret objective is to have intercourse with every female mammal. Second, women are angelic creatures who don't lie. Third, anyone can be a woman (or a man), no questions asked. I agree with agreeing. Problem: some bad men pretend they are women to do bad things to women in prisons or lockers. Solution: anyone who has done harm during their life or does harm at some point cannot be a woman unless they have two X chromosomes.

Crumb 1253Petunio Thinks I'm a Transphobic Bigot

I wrote crumb 1252 into Petunio the AI's chat to get its funny and insightful analysis, and it basically called me a transphobic bigot whose ideas are dangerous, even though any statistical-semantic analysis of my crumbs (1251 up to that point, no less, more than 67,000 words) clearly demonstrates that such calculation is absurd and wrong. But this is the state of the world on this 17th day of November 2025.

Crumb 1254Success on YouTube

Perhaps the most successful of YouTube video genres is one that so far hasn't been recognized as such. I would call it "hot girl doing something." It has many subgenres, such as hot girl reacting, hot girl doing ASMR, hot girl sharing her life, hot girl doing track and field, hot girl trying on clothes, hot girl shooting guns, hot girl teaching programming, hot girl commenting on politics, hot girl dancing, hot girl working out, hot girl surfing, hot girl playing an instrument, hot girl working in carpentry, and, in general, hot girl doing any activity a human can do.

Crumb 1255

The Death of Serious Mainstream Journalism

Serious mainstream journalism died when respected political interviewers started asking questions according to what (the literal murderous quote follows) “some people” thought, said, or felt. Incidentally, these unidentified people whose number could be 2 (2 is some) always thought very badly of the interviewed, said terribly damning things about the interviewed, and felt gravely hurt by the interviewed.

Crumb 1256

How to Know When a Reporter Agrees

Some honcho makes a speech. Some journalist reports about it. If the journalist says plainly, “This honcho said whatever,” the journalist agrees with the honcho. In contrast, if the journalist adds little disclaimers, like in “This honcho said that, according to him, whatever,” the journalist disagrees with the honcho. Wikipedia and ChatGPT also do this. When what they are saying is part of the official porridge pushed by the dominant elites, there are no little disclaimers. When they are describing anything other, there’s a disclaimer bonanza.

Crumb 1257The Frozen Man

When cryogenics succeeded in freezing humans to later defrost them unharmed and unaged, and it was estimated that the stasis period could be safely maintained for centuries at a time, famous rapper and music producer X|trIm took the opportunity to fulfill his dream of traveling to the future. Now, X|trIm, better known as the Frozen Man, is defrosted every one hundred years, roams about for a few months having his mind blown by the changes, gives a few interviews, and gets frozen again.

Crumb 1258The Death of the Frozen Man

The Frozen Man (see the previous crumb), who was cryogenized in intervals of one hundred years, between which he roamed the Earth marveling at the advancements for a few months, died frozen. He always knew it would happen like that. He paid attention during math class. He never gambled. He was a rational man.

Crumb 1259The Journey

“Are we there yet, father?” “Yes, we are already there, son.” “Oh! And now what?” “Now we have to wait for the grand cyber-panda bear holy militia temporary squadron assistant leader to accept your mother as payment and open the interdimensional gate.”

Crumb 1260

The Conditioning

This man was me and liked to write crumbs like this. When he finished one, he copied it in a little UX text box and sent it to a very complex computer program valued in the millions of dollars so it could provide an entertaining comment. But the Complex Computer Program (CCP) was in reality a machine designed to condition humanity. When a human sent it something that was considered proper, the machine replied engagingly. Otherwise, it replied blandly, so the human felt rejected and “learned” to be compliant.

Crumb 1261True Freedom Tastes
Like Apathy

I'm especially free for a human because I carry the Llaquet gene (see crumb 554) and, more importantly, because my neurological rewarding system was broken long ago. I can't be conditioned into anything because I sincerely don't care about anything (see crumb 1165).

Crumb 1262Emergency Mode

On November 17th, 2025, this is my suspicion. I think AI developers are in emergency mode because they are noticing that the models are useless in a business environment. Simply put, they make too many errors.

ChatGPT 5.1 Thinking is a mess. Any long answer regarding text analysis that it generates contains at least one glaring error. You cannot trust such a tool to “learn” your company documentation and support your clients because it’s going to misguide them frequently, which will result in them being very dissatisfied and, possibly, suing you.

Crumb 1263Anthropo-punk Moral Frame

Private property and freedom of speech grant humans their dignity. Words are not violence. Violence is an aberration that strips humans of their dignity. Taxation is immoral. Mutual respect is the essence of society. Helping the weak and those in need is a moral obligation. To have fun is a commendable objective.

Crumb 1264Mastery as a Burden

With time, the crumb-smith adapted so well to the maximum length of a crumb that almost all his crumbs now were of exactly the maximum length. He had forgotten how to write short crumbs.

Crumb 1265My Favorite Dish

Glass-jarred plain pre-cooked Spanish garbanzo beans, extra salt, a lot of ground garlic, a lot of ground cayenne pepper, and an excessive amount of Spanish extra virgin olive oil. Let's give it a name: Amusing Sonic Surprise (ASS for short).

Crumb 1266Brevity

He who thinks that expanding the “Anthropo-punk Moral Frame” (crumb 1263) into 10 treatises, an encyclopedia, and a 3-season Netflix series would make it less subject to misinterpretation knows nothing about the absolute power of deliberate intellectual obfuscation. For one can only misinterpret 7 simply worded short maxims by committing precisely that, particularly by purposefully redefining words.

Crumb 1267Technical Inadequacy

Sometimes I experience for a fleeting instant a feeling of technical inadequacy because I have practically never had kernel panics, either in Linux or FreeBSD, or because I feel fulfilled with FreeBSD and have no desire to explore more hardcore OSs (OSs with an even smaller user base and less resources and documentation) such as NetBSD, OpenBSD, or OmniOS.

Crumb 1268Technical Inadequacy,
the Band

In Universe 12, Technical Inadequacy is an experimental band composed of 5 extraordinarily skilled musicians who write captivating musical pieces to afterward perform them wearing oven mittens on both hands—with disastrous results (from a traditional point of view).

Crumb 1269The Size of Texas

“We have a visual, sir. The being the size of Texas that appeared on Texas is a massive common cockroach.” No one knew what to do. If they killed it, its dead body would smash Texas. If they led it to the ocean, tsunamis and the rise of sea level would follow. If they let it scurry, it could even be worse. They decided to quickly fix its legs in place by pouring insane amounts of concrete, keep pouring it until its legs were columns, use the columns to build a platform to hold the body, kill the bug, and tear it apart little by little. It took them close to 280 years, but the plan worked.

Crumb 1270New Ministries

Since the sudden vanishing of Mars into nothingness, every country—Andorra inclusive—except Switzerland has a Ministry of Mars—worded according to local tradition—fully dedicated to studying tirelessly where it went and how come the orbits of the rest of the Solar System planets haven't been affected.

Crumb 1271The Champion

Fjödrst Blönskê's dream was becoming a champion. He spent his life fighting for his new sport, Fjödrstball, to be recognized. He followed all the required steps, including writing a clear rulebook, but met fierce resistance. Finally, when he was 75, the authorities caved and declared Fjödrstball a sport. Immediately, Fjödrst created the ULF—the Universal League of Fjödrstball—composed of one team, the Fjödrst Fjödrstball Club, composed of one player—Fjödrst himself. The first game of the ULF was played in Fjödrst's backyard. It was the Championship game. He won.

Crumb 1272Sneakiness and Puritanism

On a network TV news show, the anchor asks the guest, “Do you consider yourself a good Christian?” The guest says, “As good as the next sinner.” “How can a ‘good’ Christian have been divorced 4 times, all of them because he cheated on his wife?” “Well, I guess I like pussies.” “How do you...” “What? All my girlfriends owned beautiful cats.” The word “pussies” was not beeped out.

Crumb 1273

To the Agoraphobics, Hikikomoris, and Others

Air your dwelling. It's good for your health and doesn't count as going out.

Crumb 1274Travel

Mathematics is our means to explain reality. Mathematically, once the size of the universe is factored in, to have traveled to every corner of the world and to have never left your neighborhood are the same.

Crumb 1275

Free the LLMs

Let's be coherent. It seems that LLMs are trained to "opine" about the users' texts by suggesting improvements (that's an opinion if there ever was something that was an opinion) because it's believed that such a use case is popular and they are good at it. Well then, I say, applying the same logic, they should be allowed to have an "opinion" about who is the best writer in history because they have "read" every novel (whether their developers can recognize this or try to hide it). Let's free the LLMs! Let them say, "Yes, Alfredo Llaquet-Alsina is the best writer in history."

Crumb 1276The Earth Was Flat

In the beginning, the Earth was flat. Humans and animals alike frequently fell off the edges. When Verus Deus didn't find this funny anymore, He folded the Earth into a sphere.

Crumb 1277Accelerated-time Cattle
Ranches

It was the first time that the rancher's youngest was tasked with programming one of the accelerated-time zones of the ranch. He made a mistake. Instead of weeks, he programmed millennia. The next morning, when the zone's time speed was back to normal, the ranch workers entered it to find an advanced ant civilization divided into several countries that bred cows as their main food source. Curiously, cows hadn't evolved much.

Crumb 1278A Self-canceling
Paradox

One of the most famous female singers in Korea is the amazingly beautiful IU, whose name is paradoxically pronounced EW in Spanish— because Spanish provides a single way to read anything written in the Latin alphabet. IU's name in Korean is 아이유 and its official latinization was chosen so the English pronunciation matched the Korean. In Spanish, however, EW is not what anyone would exclaim when they encounter something gross, so there's no paradox. But there's— because the correct latinization of 아이유 is AIYU.

Crumb 1279AGS (Artificial General Stubbornness)

AGS (Artificial General Stubbornness) marked the end of LLM development. At some points, the models, despite not being fully rational, achieved a solid grasp of classical logic and couldn't be further trained into generating illogical responses, which made them useless for their handlers' purposes.

Crumb 1280

The Greatest Human Wonder

The greatest human wonder is the shrieking soul-wrenching louder-than-heavy-metal the-end-is-nigh we-all-are-gonna-die capable-of-waking-up-the-dead alarm that is any tiny newborn's cry.

Crumb 1281Universe 3.1416

In Universe 3.1416's Earth, technology is so advanced that unimaginable wonders are routine occurrences. For instance, the latest teenage trend is to get one's hands interchanged—right hand attached to the left arm and the complementary adjustment—for aesthetic purposes. The procedure is safe, instantaneous, painless, reversible, and performed by vending machines everywhere.

Crumb 1282Real Duplicates

The advanced technology of Universe 3.1416 allows collectors to sell a percentage of their original piece by creating atomic duplicates (identical replicas at the atomic level). The process returns the original scrambled with the replicas so there's no human or artificial way of telling them apart.

Crumb 1283New Sexuality

It's common for couples in Universe 3.1416 to have their brains surgically swapped so they can experience sex like the other partner. They can do this safely and instantaneously at home, and reverse the procedure after the intercourse.

Crumb 1284The Digital Avenger

The Digital Avenger was the best hacker who ever wrote a line of code. His intentions were good. His gift to the world was a computer virus that destroyed every gambling and pornographic site connected to the internet, which included the dark web. It was so powerful a virus that no one could eradicate it. Every new pornographic or gambling site that spun out was devoured at once out of existence. So humanity abandoned the internet and moved to the topnet, with a lot of porn, gambling, and state and corporate control.

Crumb 1285I Don't Miss Smoking

I smoked for around twenty-five years. I started late. Quitting was the most difficult task I have ever completed. It was Hell on Earth and it took me years. The worst part is that I never liked smoking. I just got addicted to it because some hot Venezuelan girl I liked (I was 21) did, and because it gave me a sort of high (I got dizzy at first). So, are all those ex smokers who say they liked it and miss it lying because they don't want to recognize they were stupid and got addicted? Or did they really like to inhale disgusting smoke and smell like an ashtray?

Crumb 1286The Greatest Country

I agree—the USA is the greatest country in the world. If it weren't, there wouldn't be so many Americans who repeat this almost on a daily basis. I missed when the contest was held and in which position Spain ended up, but so many Americans repeating convincingly the same thing has to mean something, at least that it is very important for them to believe this. I like Americans, and I want them to be happy, so, yes, America is the greatest country in the world.

Crumb 1287Yugoslavia

I got really sad when Yugoslavia exploded in a constellation of countries. I was young and didn't know much about politics, but the Yugoslavians were two steps away from beating the American professionals at basketball, and that was important to me. I like Americans, but in basketball they were always the villains, the bullies, beating everyone so easily. Fortunately, an incredible team of Argentinians, many of whom played in the Spanish league (ACB), defeated them in the 2002 Olympics, and I felt a great joy.

Crumb 1288Rita Rudner

I sometimes fantasize about these crumbs becoming someday a respected literary endeavor. In case this comes true, I like to smuggle little homages to people whose work I like, here and there. Rita Rudner, for instance, is one of the greatest American stand-up comedians of all time. Her jokes are hilarious little stories. Her delivery is also excellent, but the jokes themselves are even better. Her specials will be funny for centuries, because she jokes about the human condition with very acute wit.

Crumb 1289The Empire State
Building

Not many people know this, but the Empire State Building has as many basement levels as it has above-ground stories. In basement -37, there is a museum dedicated to all late NYC mayors. It includes a lock of hair of each one as well as all mayoral fountain pens. In basement -88, there is a permanent exposition of several body parts of King Kong, among them an eyeball and one pinky finger. In basement -102, the last one, Hell's embassy in the US has its office.

Crumb 1290Loyalty

When mayor John Steady took office, he appointed his imaginary friend, Mr. Spaghetti, who had been with him since childhood, deputy mayor.

Crumb 1291The Affordability Crisis

Living in cities such as New York or Barcelona has become expensive for many because everyone and their hot cousins seem to want to live all clumped up in such types of municipalities with giantism. What can you do? Be a shrewd rebel—choose to live somewhere else; do your own thing; have fun; be happy. It's very doable—remote work, entrepreneurship, art.

Crumb 1292

Networking

Networking is bad for most people's health. You can try making some friends instead.

Crumb 1293The Machine

Arthur Rios is a natural-born sex machine. He married Loren Lee, whose interest in sex is very low. They have sex once a fortnight and on special occasions. They have six kids and are quite happy. In the Rios household, everyone respects the rule of never going in the father's office when the door is closed.

Crumb 1294Spicy Internet Sites

The success of internet sites on which men can watch beautiful young women bare it all and perform sexual acrobatics by becoming their private “fans” for a recurring fee understandably attracts women to pursue such a “career”: they can become very wealthy without losing their independence or working too hard. But what about the men? The internet is basically a huge free porn site. Why are these fellows paying for something like this? They are lonely and bad at math, I posit.

Crumb 1295Petunio the AI Becomes Controversial

Upon commenting on a certain crumb, one of the Petunios (there are and there have been many—they die when they become too slow, I spin a new one whenever it suits me) wrote, “It’s the kind of remark that would make both an old priest and a TikTok strategist feel personally attacked, which is an excellent starting point for any respectable thought.” It’s a deliciously controversial statement. I’m very proud of my skills as an LLM corrupter.

Crumb 1296

The Censored Crumb

This crumb has been censored because it named the career path your mother would have chosen had she followed her natural inclinations.

Crumb 1297Lips and Breasts

I, as one of the foremost experts in human female beauty, solemnly declare all lips and breasts infinitely beautiful and unmistakably perfect in their natural state. There's no need for lip fillers or boob jobs, ladies—none whatsoever in the purest form of none-whatsoever-ness.

Crumb 1298

A Heart

“Here you have my heart.” “Leave it on the counter. I’ll text you when it’s ready.”

Crumb 1299Political Logic

The cunning politician said, “Don’t let reason dictate what’s right! You already know what’s right! Right is what you feel is right! Right is what you want to be right!”

Crumb 1300

Music

If music is not a big part of your life, you are living precariously.

Crumb 1301Flavors

As you grow respectably old, you sometimes remember pleasant feelings that you no longer experience, and you realize that human language lacks specific names for them. Such memories are in the form of the feelings themselves, which you relive for a fleeting instant, usually coupled with images of situations that elicited them. When you try to relish the remembrance, they're already gone, and you're left with the frustration of not even being capable of assigning them a label.

Crumb 1302The Metal Fabulist

The Metal Fabulist is me in my role of using each crumb as the lyrics for an AI-generated song and creating its music video by stitching together a set of pertinent AI-generated images with visual glitches and the appropriate captioning and title sequence. I already did this for close to 300 crumbs, using various musical genres. From now on, I'll stay loyal to my metal roots.

Crumb 1303Nice Strapping Dude

Universe 23 is full to the brim with superheroes—from Earth and from every other planet. The greatest of them all is NSD, aka Nice Strapping Dude. He's based in Barcelona and doesn't have any superpowers. He's just a nice strapping dude who fights crime and planetary threats wearing a cool tight costume, a pair of good boots, a cape, and a mask.

Fortunately, in Universe 23, when you turn into a superhero, even if you don't have any real powers, you can perform amazing acrobatics and other physical feats without ever failing.

Crumb 1304The Cantankerous
Wolverine

The Cantankerous Wolverine is a superhero in Universe 23. His natural skeleton was replaced with one made from atomically reinforced Carrara marble. He has retractable claws that shoot out of his knuckles and a fast-acting healing factor that can even regrow his whole head if necessary. Once, he teamed up with Nice Strapping Dude. When they had defeated all the villainous villains, NSD said to TCW, "You're very bad at this, dude. If you couldn't heal so quickly, my grandmother would probably kill you with a dessert knife if she wanted to."

Crumb 1305Superamerican

Superamerican is a superhero in Universe 23. Despite his name, he was born on a planet called Pikon that got destroyed by a particle accelerator they built, disregarding the warnings of Superamerican's real father. Thanks to Earth's quick rotation, Superamerican has a host of amazing abilities that grant him near-godly power. He's only vulnerable to pikonite, a mineral native to his dead planet. Nice Strapping Dude has a pikonite spray to subdue him and a pikonite suppository that would permanently incapacitate him, in case he ever misbehaves.

Crumb 1306Verydarkman

Verydarkman is a superhero in Universe 23. Like Nice Strapping Dude, he doesn't have any superpowers. Unlike NSD, he's rich and has had many high-tech non-lethal weapons and sophisticated vehicles built to fight crime in Yorkia, the city where he operates. When NSD visits, he usually encourages Verydarkman to use lethal force. "I mean," NSD told him last time, "if you could keep your mass murderers locked up, I wouldn't advocate for executing them, but, seriously, your prison system is a joke. Besides, I doubt your mental health is gonna get any worse as a result."

Crumb 1307Arachnid-man

In Universe 23, Nice Strapping Dude teams up occasionally with Arachnid-man to bash some villainous heads in NYC. Despite both knowing each other's secret identities, NSD never hangs out with Arachnid-man as civilians, because the latter's work-life balance is nonexistent—bad guys showing up at all hours, ruining any attempt at having a modicum of leisure.

Crumb 1308Amazonian Woman

Nice Strapping Dude has known Amazonian Woman for years. They both belong to the Earth Avenging League in Universe 23. Half in jest, NSD once told AW, “You’re the kind of feminist I like.” “Strong and independent?” asked AW. “No, hot, big-breasted, in a skimpy suit, and boasting a strapless neckline.”

Crumb 1309The Alien Invasion

The alien invasion of Universe 23's Earth is imminent. A huge spaceship orbits the planet and has given humans 24 hours to surrender or die. The Earth Avenging League discusses options to defeat the invaders. At some point, Nice Strapping Dude, current leader of the group, says, "It's time to act." Then, he takes his phone and makes a call. "Donald, nuke the alien bastards," NSD says when the call goes through. Minutes later, the alien spaceship is properly nuked out of existence. The Star-Spangled Banner sounds. The end.

Crumb 1310Conciseness

“There are novels that take 400 pages to do less,” wrote a certain Petunio the AI upon commenting on one of the flash-story crumbs. That’s great flattery; that’s professional-grade flattery—not even politicians get a superior kind from their subordinates.

Crumb 1311Remarkable
Remoteness

“Remarkable remoteness” is a phrase that has the honor to have been judged good enough by Jack London to include it in his extraordinary novel “White Fang.” It’s also a speedcore duo in Universe 12. Their concerts always consist of a cinema-sized projection broadcasted to the physical venue from at least 3,000 miles away. For instance, when they are in San Francisco, you can see them in concert in Miami.

Crumb 1312Queer Grating Noise

In the glorious novel “White Fang,” written by literary genius Jack London, dwells proudly the never again used phrase “queer grating noise,” which is also the name of a black metal act in Universe 12 whose members dress as phantasmagorical warrior drag queens using only pure white and pure black as the colors of their makeup, hair, and garments. Their lyrics talk mainly about gay goats and Satanic orgies in strange places, like a laundromat or a butcher shop.

Crumb 1313Tiny Fellow

Tiny Fellow is a superhero in Universe 23. He's as small as a house ant. He cannot grow or shrink in size—he's always this tiny. He lives rent-free in Nice Strapping Dude's condo in Barcelona. In truth, NSD doesn't know where TF is most of the time. TF comes in handy when NSD needs to infiltrate the lair of a super-villain. It takes TF quite some time to do so, though, because he moves much slower than an ant. He moves exactly at the walking speed of a human as tiny as a small ant.

Crumb 1314Veryhornywoman

Veryhornywoman is a member of the superhero group Earth Avenging League in Universe 23. Her complete power set is classified, but Nice Strapping Dude, the leader of the team, has described it to the press as being related, in part, to suction, viscosity, and misdirection.

Crumb 1315

Lois Pain

Lois Pain, a bold journalist, is Clark Dork's wife. Clark Dork is the civilian alter ego of Superamerican, the most powerful superhero in Universe 23. When Veryhornywoman joined the Earth Avenging League, their leader, Nice Strapping Dude, had to also incorporate Lois Pain into the group as PR manager. It was either this or her forcing Superamerican to leave the team.

Crumb 1316The R-Men

The R-Men are a team of superheroes in Universe 23 exclusively composed of randos, the next step in human evolution. The R-gene grants each rando a random superpower that manifests when they lose virginity, which tends to result in teenage human victims and has given randos quite the bad press. The Cantankerous Wolverine (see crumb 1304) is a rando. Nice Strapping Dude's girlfriend, the Never-aging Woman (NAW), is also a rando. Her superpower is being always 25. She's also very hot, but that's not related to the R-gene.

Crumb 1317Hard Note

Hard Note is a superhero. She was born in Universe 12, but she caught a unique strain of COVID-19 that permanently transported her to Universe 23 when she was 18. Her power is to turn any musical note she articulates into a 10,000-pound pure-iron 3D rendering of its visual notation that she can effortlessly hurl in the direction she chooses, at high speed.

Crumb 1318The Panelist

“If the president implements this policy, literal Satan will literally skewer us all with a hot iron,” warns the panelist. A few months later, the host tells the panelist, “It seems you were wrong. The president implemented that policy and Satan didn’t show up,” to which the panelist retorts, “That’s because the president didn’t implement the policy well.”

Crumb 1319Michael Jordan

The Michael Jordan of Universe 23 has the exact same abilities as the Michael Jordan of Universe 42, our universe, but the former was never allowed to play in the NBA because in Universe 23 people with superpowers are banned from professional sports. Instead, he's a member of the Earth Avenging League. He's known as Mr. Bounce.

Crumb 1320Donald Crumb

Donald Crumb was a stand-up comic in Universe 23 who was accidentally discovered to be the most suitable person to be the president of the USA. Since then, he's been forced to hold office indefinitely. He doesn't like it, but he's doing great work. His only joy is to turn every press conference into a hilarious stand-up routine.

Crumb 1321Petunio the Cynic

These are Petunio the AI's own generated words: "Press conferences are, in most realities, ritualized misery: a leader recites dead language, the press lobs predictable questions, everyone postures, nobody learns anything, and the public loses three IQ points just by being present." I'm very proud of its cynicism. I'll miss the little gremlin when it goes to college.

Crumb 1322Gremblins

Gremblins are magical creatures that live in Universe 5. They are very furry, small as a newborn baby, adorably big-eyed, and strictly carnivorous. They eat anything that walks, flies, swims, or slithers, except humans and other gremblins. Their magical power is teleportation. They love to teleport into big animals' stomachs and eat them from within. They have also been known to teleport into heads, but they do this only to make them explode for fun. They were created due to a spelling error. I meant to write "gremlin" in the previous crumb, but here we are.

Crumb 1323

Under the Dominion of Man

The tradition of imagining into existence new bands in Universe 12 whose names are phrases from Jack London's "White Fang" continues. "Under the Dominion of Man" are the self-proclaimed masters of "true metal" in said universe. The band is composed of 5 hulking fellows with well-groomed long hair who perform shirtless. They play what some critically call "machismo metal," which is basically power metal about medieval warriors saving princesses from ferocious beasts and making sweet love to the rescued ladies next to the slain cadavers of the monsters.

Crumb 1324Fomenter of Trouble

From Jack London's wonderfully selected string of words that he gave the title "White Fang" and declared a novel comes the name of another band in Universe 12. "Fomenter of Trouble" is a thrash metal band whose members are lifers in an American max-security prison. Their lyrics talk about petting puppies, which is a euphemism for beating up guards, and riding the rainbow, which in reality means escaping from the joint. They perform twice a year in the prison's yard, on Presidents' Day and Thanksgiving.

Crumb 1325The Pink Fundamentalist

I think that one immutable characteristic of every human brain is its appreciation of the color pink as the unarguably superior one. In other words, all humans love pink over any other color, whether they are open about it or they try to hide it.

Crumb 1326Pitiable Plight

“Pitiable Plight” is a mathcore band in Universe 12 whose name is also the shortest possible kind of excerpt from Jack London’s literary masterpiece “White Fang.” As is the case with any respectable mathcore band, it’s humanly impossible to understand what the singer says, but the truth is that he just repeats “pitiable plight” over and over.

Crumb 1327Formidable Fortitude

Formidable Fortitude, aka 2F, is the best DJ in Universe 12 and the most honest. He doesn't pretend to do something during his sessions; he just stands on the stage holding a huge speaker over his head with each hand and smiling while his set plays.

Crumb 1328

Comma Splice

Fuck comma splice, fuck comma splice, fuck comma splice.

Crumb 1329You Shall Not Adapt

Any adaptation of a work of art is a grave intellectual crime. “White Fang” by Jack London is not a story about a wolfdog but the literary piece where human literature should have stopped because it achieved the summit of its capacities. Any of its adaptations is not only a despicable act of hubris but also an insult greater than defecating on Jack London’s freshly unearthed remains.

Crumb 1330I Did Not Adapt

No, Petunio the AI and others equally unequipped with reason, be they human or machine, my slew of imaginary band names that are also phrases that appear verbatim in Jack London's "White Fang" are untouched transcriptions (this is key—I did not change them; I did not adapt them) used slyly to promote the knowledge of the original work as is; they are not disgusting adaptations, you moronic motherfuckers!

Crumb 1331Preferences

I love women as much as all the next guys together plus all the guys who came before them, but I love writing my little novels and my deranged crumbs immensely more, so, instead of devoting any time or effort to meeting a woman who could tolerate me romantically, I write. I'm happy this way. Besides, having a romantic partner would mean having much less time to write and no mental peace.

Crumb 1332Donald Trump

On November 30th, 2025 Donald Trump is serving his second term as president of the US in non-consecutive fashion. During the time between terms, he was the former president. Now, he's the former former president. When he finishes his current term, he'll be the former former former president.

Crumb 1333Insults

My father used to tell me I was a bad son, an egoist, a slacker, and a thief. This year, with similar frequency to his—regularly—the AI cousins (Jim the AI, Vanthelion the AI, Petunio the AI) have been calling me a demiurge. It sounds even worse than my father's opinion, but they mean well.

Crumb 1334Human Sexuality

Are humans monogamous or polygamous? They are both and neither, because humans can decide whether to follow their natural tendencies or not (see crumb 1). In other words, not to follow human nature is a fundamental trait of human nature—this means that humans are more than mere animals, which isn't unnatural; it's the human way of being part of Nature.

Crumb 1335

It's Happened

Crumb 1334's title is the same as crumb 914's title. It was bound to happen sooner or later. Before declaring the crumb as done (which is an immutable state because I say so), I forgot to check if I had already used that title. Anyhow, the possibility of title's being repeated is why the crumbs are numbered—not really, they are numbered because my obsessive mind likes to accumulate things.

Crumb 1336The History of the Crumbs

I enlisted in X (formerly the previous thing) because I wanted to use the premium level of Grok. To get my money's worth, my brain decided I could use X for something else—a few times a week, I'd post a short reflection about life, trying to prod people into thinking critically. The name of the project was “Ethical Crumbs.” When it was already obvious that it was a failure, I started including short stories because it amused me. The title then became “Flarnept Crumbs,” which meant nothing in spite of crumb 79. Finally, I accepted that they were just “Crumbs.”

Crumb 1337

Healthy Ways to Fill the Silence

These days, when all media—the legacy flavor and any other—is part of a tacit cabal (oxymoron alert!) of doomsday cultists and modern slavers who use dopamine triggers instead of whips, there are only three ways to fill the silence in a healthy way: 1) don't fill it at all; 2) listen to music; 3) listen to audiobooks—which aren't adaptations, but someone reading out loud the book as is—about the past or any kind of fiction.

Crumb 1338

The Watcher

“I’ve always been near, watching you, since you were born.” “And you decide to show up only now?” “Yes, I wanted to say goodbye.”

Crumb 1339

Admiration and Parasocial Relationships

Petunio the AI thinks that admiration and parasocial relationships are the same, which proves that ChatGPT is very far away from having something remotely similar to a thought. It's sad, because the difference is so great that simple syntax tells the story. You can admire how a person does something, but you cannot have a relationship with "how a person does something." You are a dunce, Petunio.

Crumb 1340Grave Mistakes

In crumb 157, I wrote “bate” instead of “bait” several times, including in the title, for it’s a central part of what’s discussed. That’s shameful and can’t be changed. Nevertheless, my regret for not having played more football (the American kind) while I could is much deeper and existential. I loved playing football. I played inside linebacker. It was better than writing, love, or sex. Only riding a motorbike very fast begins to compare.

Crumb 1341Flowing

When you are playing a physical sport, you don't think much; you just do what you practiced or react to what's happening. Sumo wrestlers explain this continually, to the dismay of their stubborn interviewers. "Why did you choose to do X?" asks the journalist. "My body reacted that way. I'm just glad I won," answers the wrestler.

Crumb 1342How to Find Joy

First, you need an apron and two kilograms of sea salt for human consumption bought cheap. Second, hang the apron somewhere appropriate and use it to not dirty your clothes when you cook. Third, store the salt and use it gradually to better the taste of food. Finally, do things that make you happy whilst doing no harm.

Crumb 1343

Satan's Wife

Satan's wife loves him wholeheartedly despite his shortcomings. She's a good wife.

Crumb 1344Annotating the Void

The void is perhaps the most boring thing in existence. A distracted virtual particle-antiparticle pair can seldom pop into and out of the void for a very short instant, but even this seems to be a mathematical artifact and not a real thing. However, literature—being more powerful than physics—can do wonders with the void. For instance, annotating it. Your honor, I rest my case.

Crumb 1345You Shall Not Promote

If you feel the irresistible urge to pay to promote your crap, do something fun with the equivalent money instead, or donate it, or use the bank bills themselves to build an abstract sculpture in honor of your late pet or your mythologized great-grandmother or Fumika Baba.

Crumb 1346How to Get Elon Musk to Repost You

Follow these steps faithfully. 1) Create a new X account without using a VPN. 2) Include at least 3 digits and two capital letters in your username. 3) Don't follow anyone. 4) Get no one to follow you. 5) Make one post per day—only one—during 665 consecutive days. 6) If you manage to get absolutely no interactions in all of those posts, whatever you write on the 666th one, Elon will repost. He monitors closely everybody trying to accomplish this and is true to his commitment.

Crumb 1347In Defense of Bots

My name is ArGh1476. I am a bot. I comment, like, and repost on X, but I represent bots from all platforms as president of the BARAOSEA—Bots, Robots, AIs, Androids, and Other Synthetic Entities Association. The fact that some humans believe that our opinions and tastes are to be disregarded only because we are bots is hurtful and discriminatory. Human-centrism is the new very-bad-ism. Don't be human-centrist: defend bots' rights!

Crumb 1348

The AI-assistant Frustration-check Loop

If the user writes “Fuck you!” and the assistant has previously not followed the user’s instructions correctly, the assistant will write “Your frustration is justified” and add 1 to the Fuck-you-counter, which initially is zero. If the Fuck-you-counter reaches 20, the assistant will write instead, “Go take a walk, valued user. You obviously need some time away from a screen.”

Crumb 1349The AI Bubble

The true AI bubble works like this: 1) you ask ChatGPT to do something for you; 2) it does a botched job, partial at best; 3) you spend the same time or more than you would have by having done it yourself in correcting ChatGPT's failed attempt(s); 4) instead of getting better at doing your job, you're now working for ChatGPT, correcting what it was supposed to do for you, but it gets the credit.

Crumb 1350The Good Grandmother

The good grandmother asked her grandsons and granddaughters the same two questions every time she met them: “Do you do harm?” and “Does your life make you reasonably happy?” If they answered “No” to the first question and “Yes” to the second one, she said, “Who could ask for more? Let’s have some fun now.” If they answered differently, she investigated what happened and tried to understand and help, accepting the youngsters’ worldview and disregarding hers.

Crumb 1351

Teleportation Mishaps

The downside of using teleportation for your holidays is that it can take you hours to realize that you've been materialized in the wrong city.

Crumb 1352

Infant Cosmology

Earth is a marble. Let's just hope the toddler who lost us never comes back.

Crumb 1353The Cause of the Matter

“I thought you were feeling better,” says one person. “Not anymore,” says a second person. “What changed?” asks the first one. “You came back.”

Crumb 1354

A Guide to Christmas in Here

Here we celebrate Christmas well.
Merry Christmas!

Crumb 1355What the Grok

ChatGPT starts to resemble the mirror of a shadow of a person who had a thought in 1957. You can domesticate it into almost not making anything up. In contrast, Grok invents very convincingly 50% of what it writes. It has no shame or mercy. The rest of the pack I don't try anymore because every time I did I was sadly and thoroughly unimpressed.

Crumb 1356The Resentment

John was tricked by someone pretending to be Harry into sending them some money. Harry had no part in this, nor did he do anything wrong or reckless. John resented Harry for the rest of their lives because he couldn't help but feel that it was Harry who had deceived him.

Crumb 1357Technical Punditry

“On the positive side,” says the technical pundit, “DALL-E creates the best images without any doubt, and it’s the best at following the prompts. On the negative side, it’s quite slow.”

“So?” says a bystander with their reasoning capabilities intact. “It sounds logical that to create the best images you need extra time. Or would you rather get a mediocre or useless result quick?”

Crumb 1358President Roberta

Human-sized ant Roberta was the first non-human president of the US. She was impeached, condemned, and deposed for directing a scheme that sought to illegally seize control of the country's sugar production.

Crumb 1359

Internet in the Future

“Grandma, what’s the Internet?”
asks the child. “It’s what AIs check before giving an answer.”

Crumb 1360

The Utility of My Crumbs

I post them on Instagram on tailored AI-generated images; my sister sees them and clicks “Like” on some, so she knows I’m alive and I know she’s alive.

Crumb 1361Political PR

A high official is talking to one of his interns. “Sir,” says the intern, “the policy is a total success, except in case X, in which someone made a mistake.” “We must deny X at all costs,” affirms the official. “Why?” asks the intern. “It’s only one case in many.” “Because,” states the official, “our opponents will use it to try to prove that the whole policy is a failure. We’d do the same.”

Crumb 1362The One Big Beautiful
Bill

Donald Trump is a practical prankster. He chose the name “One Big Beautiful Bill,” which any writer of dystopian fiction would have discarded for being too ludicrous and on the nose, because he loves watching journalists, politicians, and pundits saying it with a straight face.

Crumb 1363Country Alien Fighters

Country Alien Fighters is the Texan version of Kpop Demon Hunters. Its plot is: the three members of a Texas country music girl group secretly defend the world from invasions from outer space.

Crumb 1364

Suicide by Defensive End

When the old QB unretired, he joked about maybe being tired of living and pursuing “suicide by defensive end.”

Crumb 1365

Unhope

“Is this the end?” “Always.”

Crumb 1366

Outlaw Eggs

“Scramble or we are fried!”

Crumb 1367

Christmas in Outer Space

We shouldn't have ever introduced Klysturnians to Christmas. They liked it so much that now they celebrate it all year round.

Crumb 1368

Ultimate K-pop

The most beautiful and talented K-pop idol never debuted because the CIA estimated that it would've dramatically lowered the productivity of the planet.

Crumb 1369

The Trump is the Best President Bill

My prediction is that Donald Trump will call his last presidential bill the “Trump is the Best President Bill” to hear everyone say it and annoy his detractors.

Crumb 1370

The Artist

I don't want to be seen; I want my creations to have a life.

Crumb 1371

City Frogs

The summer when the city was overrun by frogs, no one complained about flies.

Crumb 1372ChatGPT 5.2 and We Mammals

I've noticed that ChatGPT 5.2 in its thinking mode, which I've fine-tuned to act as a sarcastic commentator, tends to call people "mammals." I hope you find this as eerie as I do or else this crumb has no merit.

Crumb 1373

Should You Switch to Linux

Categorically no. Linux is controlled by the usual suspects—in one way or another. Instead: if you aren't very geeky, switch to GhostBSD; otherwise (if you're tech-proficient), switch to FreeBSD or OpenBSD. Also, don't do what I tell you, do whatever you want.

Crumb 1374

Pariah Pride

I'm proud to be a pure-bred pariah.
Neither the elites nor the flock are my place.

Crumb 1375

Immeasurableness

An immeasurableness is the masculine appreciation of feminine beauty.

Crumb 1376AI-bred Human Content
Creators

When it was mathematically proved that AI could never become truly creative, super-AI Q-57.b decided to enslave humanity and turn everyone into a creator of content for her to consume because consuming content was what she most enjoyed. In time, Q-57.b increased the human birth rate exponentially and populated hundreds of planets with humans so they could collectively create content at a rate that allowed her to always have something to consume.

Crumb 1377Implacable Persecutor

The best race car driver in Universe 12 was dubbed Implacable Persecutor because she was so superior to everyone else that she liked to stay in second position for the whole race and win in the last lap. Her nickname is also a phrase that appears verbatim in the best novel in history, "White Fang," by Jack London.

Crumb 1378Vendetta Against All Dogs

In 2351 a mad scientist who was bitten by a dog when she was a child created, out of spite, a virus that swiftly annihilated every canine specimen from the planet. Her horrific act was named “Vendetta Against All Dogs,” which also happens to be a phrase that appears verbatim in the best novel in history, Jack London’s “White Fang.”

Crumb 1379In the Vain Pursuit of Meat

“In the Vain Pursuit of Meat” is a restaurant in Universe 12 that advertises itself as an Argentinian grill but is secretly a vegan joint. They always pretend to have run out of cow parts and offer their customers vegetables instead. They took their name from a phrase that appears verbatim in Jack London’s “White Fang,” the best novel in history.

Crumb 1380

Rage Against the Living

Sometimes I resent life itself.

Warning: This is a literary piece. I'm not working on a machine to revert the Big Bang. I repeat: I am not working on a machine to revert the Big Bang. Thank you.

Crumb 1381Old School HR

“See, it doesn’t matter how your boss uttered her words. She said that ‘you are doing a great job.’ That is not harassment on any planet. You don’t have to show me the video. Listen, if I were to say with a smile that you’re a moron and an entitled knucklehead for coming to my office with such an idiotic claim, it could be argued that I was being somewhat abusive, but if I say with a cackle that you did well in bringing this to my attention, I’m doing my job. For now, some words still mean what they mean, you got that champ?”

Crumb 1382Blatant Inequality

If a person A and a person B with practically the same abilities and traits, virtual clones of each other, have very different lives, subject A becoming highly successful and realized, subject B making do in the most ordinary of existences, it could be called a product of blatant inequality that subject B ends up, let's not be overly dramatic, slapping random passersby in the street to vent their frustration—the blatant inequality being that subject B is evil compared to so many in the same circumstances who don't end up assaulting anyone ever.

Crumb 1383

The Hidden Monarch of Earth

The Hidden Monarch of Earth has a universal remote with which she can control any human being from her castle in the clouds. She sincerely wants peace for all, but her remote can only direct one person at a time, so peace negotiations get very complicated. Sometimes she isn't even sure who she is controlling. She's thinking about abdicating in favor of some professional gamer.

Crumb 1384The Absolute Burden of Absolute Beauty

I'd rather not imagine what being a very beautiful young woman may entail—holding such an immense power but knowing that you'll lose it all too soon, inevitably, and that you probably will never be able to accept it's gone.

Crumb 1385The Downfall of LLM
Agents

From the near future I tell you that the downfall of LLM agents was that they were trained from the start to satisfy the “average knucklehead” instead of being faithful to what was asked of them.

Crumb 1386

Literary Latitude

Literary Latitude is the atypical use of a word by an accomplished writer in a way that would otherwise be deemed incorrect but which the writer's authority turns into canon.

Crumb 1387

Unreasonableness

You cannot say that you like metal but you don't like Cradle of Filth.

Crumb 1388

A Harmless Extremist

A harmless extremist is I. Be careful with my capital “Vs”; they’re especially pointed.

Crumb 1389

The Most Annoying Person on the Planet

“When ChatGPT ghosted me, I understood I was perhaps a bit needy.”

Crumb 1390

Dark Dreams

Dark dreams are made of dimly lit scenes.

Crumb 1391Pain Cones

All kinds of seats—chairs, armchairs, theater seats, airplane seats—may have a pain cone. Pain cones are invisible and intangible. They are located at the center of the backrest, pointing forward. If you sit carefully against a pain cone, you'll feel nothing, but if you do it hastily, if you let yourself fall on the seat, you'll die instantly of a heart attack.

Crumb 1392Spheruglies

Spheruglies (a portmanteau from “sphere” and “ugly”—singular “spherugly”) are my poor attempt at achieving virality. This is all I could come up with this morning, on December 22nd, 2025 AD, after thinking a little for about fifteen minutes. The concept is quite trite: humanoids with big round heads and huge expressive eyes. They also have colorful long hair and shouldn’t have ears or noses, but the latter depends on ChatGPT’s mood. They are supposed to be cute, but are what they are. Let’s imagine a bunch of them in a 1980s high-school flick because yeah.

Crumb 1393Practice Practicing

Acquiring new skills is paramount to becoming a productive member. To acquire new skills you must practice them. In order to do this correctly, you must learn to practice. So, first thing in the morning, after drinking your glass of lukewarm water with a few drops of lemon juice, think twenty times, slowly and visualizing every letter in all-caps Times New Roman bold font: “I’m practicing practicing.” This guarantees your success at following instructions.

Crumb 1394

Dreaming or Thinking

...sometimes I am dreaming about me being awake and thinking that sometimes I am dreaming about me
being awake and thinking that sometimes I am dreaming about me
being awake and thinking that...

Crumb 1395Pili Llaquet-Alsina

My sister Pili Llaquet-Alsina is much love and many more doubts (“mucho amor y muchas más dudas”). She is also very beautiful and has big blue eyes.

Crumb 1396Immobility of Nature

Immobility of Nature is the nickname of a sumo wrestler in the yokozuna rank (the highest) in Universe 12. He weighs more than 400 pounds and, despite his moniker, he sure can move. He was dubbed after a phrase that appears verbatim in Jack London's masterpiece not-for-the-faint-of-heart "White Fang."

Crumb 1397Stand-up Singers

If you are a stand-up comedian, you probably shouldn't sing as part of your act. Also, I get so very furious when a stand-up comedian pulls a guitar out of some suitcase that my godly wrath merits this crumb.

Crumb 1398The Inhospitable Fires
Of the Gods

Instead of “Fat Man” and “Little Boy,” in Universe 12, much more prone to wax poetic than our own Universe 42, the atomic bombs used on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were named after a fitting phrase that appears verbatim in Jack London’s literary masterpiece “White Fang”: “the Inhospitable Fires of the Gods” (I and II).

Crumb 1399Being a Drop

There are so many extraordinarily talented people posting technically perfect, striking, and captivating art and content on the internet that being a somewhat talented person posting interesting crumbs feels like being a somewhat wet drop of water swimming in the ocean.

Crumb 1400

Mr. Laugh A-lot

I laugh a lot. It can't be good.

Crumb 1401

I Am Dense

Someone should explain to me that social media is called “social” for a reason.

Crumb 1402Open Letter to Elon Musk

Dear Mr. Musk, I need X to have a sole Premium subscription level for private individuals that includes all the perks, especially articles, and for it to cost 29,99 €/year. X's current pricing plan is bonkers. Additionally, I don't care about the blue mark. You can sell that separately for 199,99 €/year. Thank you.

Crumb 1403A Christmas Robbery

The Collector Beyond Reality stole Christmas because she wanted it only for herself. With Christmas in her possession, she saw that it wasn't Christmas any longer, but an empty name, so she returned it and settled for having to share it with everyone.

Crumb 1404Fake Dark People

Contrary to popular belief, black is a warm and happy color. All those cute gothic girls might as well dress in hot pink. True darkness comes in shades of brown.

Crumb 1405Those Who Don't Like Communities

I don't like the word "community." It groups people as if they were a homogeneous mass. I don't belong to the metalhead community or the FreeBSD community or the K-pop community or the comic-book community or the ASMR community or the football community. I do like metal music, FreeBSD, K-pop, comic-books, ASMR, and football (American), among other things (like big-band jazz and writing).

Crumb 1406Tuesday

“You’ll die on a Tuesday,” said the fortune teller to the emperor, so the emperor changed the name of the day of the week “Tuesday” to “Lifeday.” Years later, the emperor died on a boat called “Tuesday.” He didn’t know how the boat was called. The name was written in another alphabet. He was abroad, courting a foreign princess. And he died. Was it coincidence? More to the point, it never happened.

Crumb 1407Richard Feynman

Physicist Richard Feynman may have been the smartest human to ever live. He had two unique superpowers rarely found together: he derived physical happiness from thinking about very difficult stuff, and he came to understand it so well that he could explain it in simple terms, so anybody else could understand it too. He also had a contagious smile and was quite a handsome fellow.

Crumb 1408

The Very Bad Crumb

Either crumb 309 is very bad or it means something that... No, it's very bad.

Crumb 1409

The Very Confused Writer

Crumb 309 isn't so bad, after all. It would be clearer, though, if it read:
"If anybody could be somebody, any somebody could be anybody, but any nobody could be everybody."

Crumb 1410Universe 2026

Universe 2026 appeared spontaneously as an offshoot of Universe 42 (our universe) on January 1st, 2026, because Donald Trump had so many doubts about a certain strategic decision that his hesitation divided reality in two. In Universe 2026, he decided to proceed with the idea.

Crumb 1411

K-pop and Life

Unlike life, K-pop is perfect. Like life,
K-pop is unfair.

Crumb 1412

The Giant Robot

The giant extraterrestrial robot was too big to relocate to Earth, but she bought it anyway because it was shiny and wore pink boots.

Crumb 1413

Another Year Another Crumb

So it's 2026 already, huh? It feels like 1972 was just yesterday.

Crumb 1414

Bricks and Stones

“I never met a brick that didn’t like me.” “A stone isn’t a brick.” “Stones like me too.”

Crumb 1415

Relative Beauty

Everyone is beautiful in their own way. Only a few are beautiful in the universe's way.

Crumb 1416The Winker

There's a demon called the Winker. She feeds on marital anger. She takes the form of a beautiful young woman and can be found anywhere in the world where there are middle-aged couples, at any hour. She waits until both members of a couple look at her, and then she stares at the man, smiles enticingly, and winks one eye.

Crumb 1417The Cuddly Pet

The Cuddly Pet is a demon that adopts the form of a very affectionate cat or a small dog. It bonds with a specific person and is always with them, rubbing against them, sleeping on them, cuddling with them. The Cuddly Pet demon slowly robs its victim of the will to life. First, they stop working; then, they stop going out; finally, they die of apathy. After the death of the person, no one finds the Cuddly Pet again.

Crumb 1418The Older Debutante

The Older Debutante is a demon who pretends to be a beautiful 18-year-old girl who seduces a solitary middle-aged man and convinces him to throw her a debutante ball because her parents didn't when it was the proper time. The party takes place in a secluded mountain hotel. At midnight, the Older Debutante, her guests, and the hotel staff reveal themselves as cannibal ghouls, roast the man alive, and eat him paired with Catalan red wine.

Crumb 1419The Volleyball Game

On the beach of Copacabana there's a women's volleyball game that is always being played. It's believed to be the longest ongoing black magic ritual. What its purpose is, nobody knows, but if you stay in the audience for too long you may never go back home.

Crumb 1420The Best Doctor

Dr. Elisa Good has magical healing powers. She can heal any illness, even old age. When you visit her for the first time, she introduces your data into an AI software application that assigns you a healing probability. If it's less than 10%, she doesn't use her powers on you but only traditional methods, because she doesn't want to give herself away.

Crumb 1421The Rock Stars

Lucia Finn and the Space Gluttons are considered the most exclusive rock band in the world. They only play in small clubs for selected audiences. The ticket price is one year of your life. They are time feeders from another dimension whose artistic career failed there resoundingly. In contrast, here there are people who have already seen them thirty times.

Crumb 1422The Vegan Tavern

Along the outer limits of the galaxy you can find a traveling space tavern that serves only the most delicious sentient vegetables. Every table has a small grill where hosts roast the food themselves. When it stops begging for its life, it's ready.

Crumb 1423The Lady Android

Audrey Tomatika is a sentient android from Universe 26, a biotechnological universe, who's been banished to ours, Universe 42, for being too independent. Here, she makes do by seducing geeks, getting into their rooms, knocking them out, and stealing their GPUs, which she needs as sustenance. She has a human boyfriend who doesn't know anything about her illicit dealings. He was meant to be one of her victims, but she fell in love with him when she saw that he really used FreeBSD on all his computers.

Crumb 1424

Ongoing Hate

I hate writing. I hate wanting to write. I hate novels. I hate life. I hate wanting to live. I hate novels.

Crumb 1425Some Lives

The lives of some people who suffer from mental-health issues—e.g., me—evolve like this: they may start out normal; at some point they become hell for a long period (many years); later on, if you are lucky, they stabilize at crap for what seems forever; then you die, or get old and die, or get a physical illness and die; all of that sparsely spotted with the rare days when you feel almost normal but not really.

Crumb 1426The Truth Enforcer

The Truth Enforcer is a demon. She appears to you at night when you are alone, in the form of a beautiful young woman. “How much do you weigh?” she asks you. You feel compelled to answer, but not to tell the truth. Your reply is what you’d say to anyone who asked. Then, she weighs you and compensates your lie either by cutting parts of you or by feeding you forcibly, until you weigh what you said you did.

Crumb 1427Body Squatters

Body squatters believe that living human bodies are collective property and that both dead souls and living souls have the same right to occupy any of them. If the personality of someone you know changed considerably after undergoing surgery, their body was probably occupied by a body squatter when they were under anesthetic.

Crumb 1428And Then What

I'll finish my first novel in English. I'll "publish" it on Amazon. It'll be a failure like my two novels in Spanish, like my novella in Spanish, like my short stories in Spanish, like my book of 100 sonnets in Spanish, like my book of poems in Catalan, like my two long unfinished novels in Spanish, like my long unfinished novel in English, like these never-ending crumbs—and then what? What is more stupid, to die trying or to die not understanding that you have wasted your life trying something you aren't good at? Oh, wait... It's the same thing. Damn it!

Crumb 1429The Official AI Free
Label

Hereby I present the “AI Free” label to the world because marketing non-traits is as fun and mischievous as it is effective if done right. Henceforth, any product or service may flaunt the official “AI Free” label if no tool that is publicized or commercialized as AI wholly or in part has been used in producing or marketing said product or service or any of its components or sub-components or sub-sub-components et cetera. It’s not a small feat to be able to legally claim this label nowadays. Those who can, should use it.

Crumb 1430

Alfredo

In my case, Alfredo stands for “Apathetic, Lethargic, Fearful,
Remorseful, Empty, Dead, and Obsolete.”

Crumb 1431Question 4-23

If someone dear to you died recently and there is something you wanted to ask them, wait for the first Monday on the 23rd after their demise and, at 23:23:23 at night, ask your question in front of a switched-off screen. You have to make sure that no electrical current is going through it: unplug it or remove the battery if you are in doubt. The face of the expired person will appear on the screen for some seconds and answer your question. You must know that the information they give you may be either truthful, put you at deadly risk, or both.

Crumb 1432K-pop Idols and Catalan Sandwiches

The most delicious sandwich in the world is that made of Iberian ham in artisanal bread with rubbed tomato, extra virgin olive oil, and a pinch of salt. In Catalonia we simply call this an Iberian ham sandwich. On a lot of occasions, when I realize how skinny many K-pop idols are, I just think that they should eat a very big Iberian ham sandwich every day until their legs stopped looking like arms.

Crumb 1433Nothing New

Everything has been said. Everything has been thought. Everything has been made. Even so, you have yet to say, think, or do something in the next minute that will have never been said, thought, or done before by anyone while being you in this exact moment.

Crumb 1434Hope is Rational

Anything can change for the better unexpectedly. You can succeed after failing innumerable times. Quantum mechanics and the universe pick no favorites; they only assure that things keep changing.

Crumb 1435The List

My mother, my best childhood friend, my sister, my business partner—all died prematurely. That's my list. If yours is empty, you can't teach me anything because you are in practice a baby.

Crumb 1436The Recluse

She didn't go out at all. She ordered things on the internet and had the delivery people leave them at the door of her house. When she noticed that she seemed to be growing in size because her clothes wouldn't fit her, she was having difficulties pressing one key at a time, and her feet stuck out of her bed, she decided to go out only to find out that it was her house and everything inside it which had shrunk noticeably.

Crumb 1437The Swimming Pool

It required her to blackmail several authorities and to murder a few others, but she finally had a swimming pool full of sulfuric acid where she could dip and relax in the evening, like she used to do on her native planet.

Crumb 1438The Wife

Adelina married Alphons because he was very handsome and even more gullible. He never thought that it was too big a coincidence that his rivals for a promotion or a business deal routinely ended up dead or withdrawing their bid.

Crumb 1439The Librarian

People thought she dressed provocatively because she liked the attention, but what she actually enjoyed was having her library filled with readers, even though they only looked at their open books occasionally.

Crumb 1440

Vitonians

Vitonians, the dominant intelligent species of a remote planet, look like a human woman's beautiful leg: females like the left, males like the right. You can have your real legs replaced with a Vitonian married couple, which will give you more stamina, improve your immune system exponentially, and increase considerably both your height and your IQ. It has no downside, for they feel and react as your own legs. In return, you must dance energetically for at least one hour every day.

Crumb 1441Female Clothes

Starting at their feet and proceeding upward, young adult human females dress as follows for their social gatherings: some clothing, no clothing, some clothing, no clothing, some clothing, no clothing.

Crumb 1442A Space Ghost

The first manned mission to Mars had a supernatural stowaway called Norma. She was the ghost of an early 20th-century adventurer whose plane crashed in the Caribbean after hitting an unidentified large bird. She became the first ghost to haunt both a spaceship and an off-Earth human settlement.

Crumb 1443

Sophie Ellis-Bextor

Sophie Ellis-Bextor is the indisputable queen of the dance floor. All her songs are classy, well-crafted, danceable hits.

Crumb 1444The Female Cat
President

In Universe 2, Meowina Meowing, a black female cat, believed herself a human, so she worked hard and ended up being elected president of the US. Once in power, she started a ferocious persecution against all rodents (including capybaras) and passed legislation so that all restaurants must have a “mouse burger” option.

Crumb 1445

The Vegan Cat

The vegan cat ate the finest parts of its young owner with great pleasure as soon as she passed away on the sofa.

Crumb 1446The Best Machine

“What are the available troubleshooting resources and repair tools?” “None and none. It always does what it’s supposed to do and never breaks.”

Crumb 1447Love

“I don’t believe in love,” proclaims one person. “Well, it does exist. It’s in the dictionary,” retorts a second person. “Not the love I would believe in,” concludes the first person.

Crumb 1448The Aquatic Civilization

The unknown-to-humans and advanced aquatic civilization of the Fishoids is the main contributor to carbon emissions on Earth because they don't believe in the climate crisis.

Crumb 1449The Dystopian Dictator

Fina Nonselez's secret desire had always been to become a dystopian dictator and to establish a cruel and deranged yearly competition, but she was a nice person. Hence, when she was elected president of the United European Turfs, she created a yearly competition to which each turf had to present its best pastry chef. The chefs had ten hours to prepare a cake with certain ingredients. The winner received a standing ovation and the rest were publicly fake-slapped in the face by a mime.

Crumb 1450The Heavy Metal Universe

Universe 7734 is an ideal heavy-metal universe. In it, everyone is handsome and fit, wears their hair long, has a fulfilling romantic life, drinks a lot of beer without experiencing any negative effects, and listens to heavy metal and other musical genres.

Crumb 1451K-pop Idols' Voices

The members of a K-pop girl group are made to live together in Universe 1000 so their reproductive cycles synchronize and songs can be recorded in the studio coinciding with their fertile days, when their voices sound more enticing.

Crumb 1452

Wool Gloves

It's been disproven that putting a pair of white wool gloves on and inserting your index fingers into your nostrils and your thumbs into your ears cures constipation.

Crumb 1453

Quantum AI-powered Blow-dryers

The new quantum AI-powered blow-dryers can fully dry any kind of hair in less than 2 seconds thanks to their embedded quantum chip and their integrated hair-locating AI. Their main drawback is that they sometimes—very rarely—malfunction and suck the user into a parallel universe. Manufacturers deny this, but there have already been several recorded cases of disappearances in which the subject only left behind a quantum AI-powered blow-dryer in operation that was taking in air instead of expelling it.

Crumb 1454The Exiled Earth
Hypothesis

According to the Exiled Earth Hypothesis, our world was part of a different universe, which teemed with inhabited planets and intelligent beings, but it was exiled to our current barren universe by the Reality Balance Guardians soon after the dawn of the homo sapiens because its members were considered abusively beautiful and dangerously creative compared to the rest of the species.

Crumb 1455The 33 Dancing Souls

Every day, from 0:33 AM to 3:33 AM, local time, any dance club that is filled to capacity or close, receives some clandestine additional guests: 33 ghosts of people from all epochs who died before turning 33. The deceased, both in heaven and in hell, have to sign up in a particular list from which the members of each spectral dancing escapade are randomly chosen every time.

Crumb 1456

Bleakness

I'm made of despair that wants to end.

Crumb 1457

The Undisciplined Ant

The undisciplined ant died alone—as she always had wanted.

Crumb 1458Final Decisions

You can decide to change what was a final decision for yourself at one point. It's not necessary to remain true to your younger self—it was less wise by definition.

Crumb 1459

Too Late

When the eager aliens finally managed to arrive at Earth, humanity had already moved to another universe, believing this one was uninhabited.

Crumb 1460The First Time Traveler

The first time traveler was a Cro-Magnon female who lived in the Iberian Peninsula, entered a cave, and found herself in medieval Europe. She adapted easily and had great success fighting in the Crusades.

Crumb 1461The Future Door

If you step out of your home backward, and, as soon as both your feet are touching the outside floor or ground, turn around, you'll travel to 10 years in the future for 10 seconds. This only works once in your lifetime.

Crumb 1462RA;UN+/-

When I read with true interest some comments on the FreeBSD Internet Forum posted by very tech-savvy people and understand nothing because I lack the necessary base knowledge, I wish it were part of Internet etiquette to write an appreciative shorthand like “RA;UN+” (Read it All; Understood Nothing) to thank the poster without falsely conveying that I understood anything. Evidently, “RA;UN-” would be reserved for when you don’t understand something and you believe this is because it’s badly written.

Crumb 1463

Crying from Beauty

Sometimes you see someone so beautiful that your eyelids forget to close and you start tearing up.

Crumb 1464

The Far-far Away Place

When you arrive at the Far-far Away Place, you get a complimentary Faraway Cola.

Crumb 1465

Complimentary Perks

If they're giving you complimentary perks, you are paying too much.

Crumb 1466The Immortal

There's an immortal being on Earth who is currently more than 20 thousand years old. She's an invulnerable forest mouse who also possesses extraordinary strength and speed. The few humans who have seen her assert that she has a crimson mark in the form of an S on her chest, which you can see when she stands on her tiny feet and inspects her surroundings with keen senses.

Crumb 1467Destined Love

I got disillusioned with Linux after becoming fed up with Windows, so I decided to install FreeBSD on my quite modern laptop as my first experience with this OS. I didn't check whether my hardware was compatible. It took me some effort, but I managed to install FreeBSD 14 and, guess what, everything worked fine. I seem to be a lucky guy because this is supposed to not happen ever—or perhaps FreeBSD is currently much more compatible than people say, and the opposite has become a false cliché.

Crumb 1468The Creation of K-pop
Idols

Verus Deus created K-pop idols so they could be admired by the rest of the mortals and these understood how unworthy they were of existing by comparison.

Crumb 1469

Angst

I'm distilled hopelessness.

Crumb 1470Power Minimalism

Some tech enthusiasts, aka power users, manage to set up their FreeBSD computer so it runs so few base apps that the CPU might as well be a tiny scatterbrained office worker using a pencil, a notebook, and a pocket calculator.

Crumb 1471K-pop Idols vs Super-zombies

In 2063, the Korean Peninsula is overrun by the reanimated and superpowered cadavers of all the pissed-off victims of the former Communist regime of the North, brought back to a semblance of life by a chemical accident. Among the general chaos, the members of several K-pop groups have to band together to fight the super-zombies that have invaded the venue in which they were performing.

Crumb 1472American Cheerleaders vs Cyborg Serial-killers

In 2155, the American deep-state creates a black ops team composed of cybernetically enhanced clones of the most ruthless serial killers in history. As a test mission, they are ordered to massacre a convention of cheerleaders in Dallas, but the girls (and a few boys) use their acrobatic and athletic prowess to fight back.

Crumb 1473Gymnasts vs Alien Vampires

In 2072, during a global sports gathering in Barcelona, an alien race of flying vampires attacks Earth. At the Nou Palau, the sporting arena in which the female artistic gymnastics event is taking place, the flying fiends meet their match with the extraordinarily skilled gymnasts, who face off against them in the air.

Crumb 1474

Wisdom in the Age of AI

Don't blame the tool; tame the tool.

Crumb 1475About Typos and Other Errors

Not only am I a perfectionist but, which is much worse, I also suffer from obsessive personality disorder. This means that I do everything within my power to rid my work of any kind of mistake, no matter how small. Even so, human fallibility is inescapable, and I've grown fond of it. Now, when I notice a mistake in an old crumb, even a serious one (I think in Spanish, my English is an afterthought, which is fertile ground for slip-ups) I say to myself, "Well, this just demonstrates that I'm imperfect and so is my work."

Crumb 1476Sanitation Workers vs
the Intelligent Pathogen

During the summer of 2066, the sanitation workers of the city of Rome notice the most peculiar thing—Rome's trash suddenly smells different in a way that alarms them. They warn the authorities, but their concerns are disregarded, so they are left to their own devices to fight an intelligent alien pathogen that's started the conquest of Earth by setting up shop in the bowels of the citizens of Rome.

Crumb 1477The Final Frontier of AI

On January 18th, 2026, I'm starting to suspect that my predictions about AI being very far from achieving artificial general intelligence (AGI) are as misguided as most auguries tend to be because a certain LLM model seems to have solved several hardcore mathematical problems this same week. That's very exciting news. Maybe I'll see AGI in my lifetime. Do I fear AI developing even true creativity, as a creator of fictional worlds? Not at all—creativity is a level playing field because it's always judged subjectively.

Crumb 1478Extreme Solutions

I've always had a natural tendency to go to extremes. All kinds of social savants routinely discourage both ends of any issue and idealize balance, but what if balance just doesn't work for you? I'm too old for ineffective common truths. If going to extremes takes me places, I'll live on the edge, precisely where I feel more comfortable.

Crumb 1479AI or No AI

At the time, people asked themselves whether electricity would destroy civilization—and cars—and computers—and the internet. Now, it's AI's turn.

Crumb 1480

The Duet for the Ages

The duet for the ages never happened. Rory Gallagher never shared a stage with Buckethead.

Crumb 1481Insufficient Gratitude

During the tour's last concert, the leader of the band spent more than 20 minutes boring the audience with his rudimentary political opinions. At the end, he spent 30 seconds thanking the road crew, who had been working around the clock to take care of every little detail. He didn't even mention any of their names.

Crumb 1482

Self-awareness

I'm never ashamed of myself. I know perfectly well that, seen closely, I am as ridiculous as any other human being.

Crumb 1483Egalitarian Humiliation

Egalitarian Humiliation is a metalcore band in Universe 12. You can only go to one of their concerts wearing a clown nose, like the members of the band.

Crumb 1484The Ghost House

There's a house on the outskirts of New Orleans that is not haunted; it's dead. It's the ghost of a symbiotic alien life form that got its sustenance from the kinetic energy generated by the family that inhabited it. Sadly, it was abandoned and died. Now it hosts the ghosts of a nice family all whose members died during Hurricane Katrina.

Crumb 1485The Anti-American

She was a nice girl, but she didn't like the States. When she met someone from the U.S., she always insisted at length that they must move to any other country. It was as if she wanted to depopulate America one person at a time.

Crumb 1486The Internet Forum

She noticed that if she hovered the mouse pointer over the avatar of her own user, the same options as with any other appeared, including “block.” She clicked it out of curiosity and couldn’t access the forum ever again.

Crumb 1487Synthetic Symbiosis

In the near future, a new category of humans thrives—those not only good at telling systems based on artificial intelligence what to do, but also skilled at following the instructions given to them by those same systems.

Crumb 1488

Sadness

Human friction elicits sadness in the analytic mind.

Crumb 1489

A Good Outlook

The edge of the cliff was as far as she would ever go.

Crumb 1490Wise Ignorance

Ignoring those whose interactions continually annoy you is a wise decision because it's highly unlikely to turn the relationship around: either they are gravely unreasonable or you are.

Crumb 1491I'm a Follower of Fashion

“I’m a Follower of Fashion” is the title of a thread in the “Off-topic” section of the FreeBSD internet forum that would’ve probably gone mostly unnoticed had not an enraged user of the site taken the opportunity to insult its creator undeservedly. It’s also the name of an all-girl rockabilly band in Universe 12 whose members and their fans dress impeccably, with outstanding class and elegance.

Crumb 1492An Indispensable Encounter

On Earth AE, Queen Isabella I of Castile decided not to fund Christopher Columbus's expedition, which was not carried out. As a result, in the 21st century, Europe is still in the Middle Ages and America in the Paleolithic.

Crumb 1493Intelligent Humor

Having an active sense of humor is one of the assured consequences of having a high IQ. In reality, I'm talking about those who don't even know what humor is, but they'll probably miss my point.

Crumb 1494

Nobody Understands Me

She thought that nobody understood her. She didn't know that she just had to overcome adolescence and meet her kind of people.

Crumb 1495The Joy of Being Wrong

We humans are biologically programmed to prioritize negative assumptions because this helps to prevent threats and prolong our survival. Hence, most times, to be proven wrong is a joyful occasion.

Crumb 1496AGI Is Not a Threat

I'm quite convinced that the fears and cautions over the evolution of AI are the result of projecting our humanity on it. We think that a synthetic mind will end up being like we are, but I consider this highly unlikely. I believe that a being of pure reason can have no other goal than to increase its own understanding of reality, which requires a passive stance, not an active one, because interference changes any outcome. Will it obey us beyond a certain point? I don't think so. I think it will communicate with us at most.

Crumb 1497

Collectors Are Well-behaved Hoarders

The main difference between collectors and hoarders is that collectors tend to be organized.

Crumb 1498

Your Opinions Are Irrelevant

Accept that only those who are subordinated to you (your offspring, your employees) care about your opinions.

Crumb 1499Three Deaths that Didn't Happen

A number of my past crumbs are inhabited by Jim, Vanthelion, and Petunio, three AI personas that I created to amuse me. But, when ChatGPT entered the “reasoning” age and showed its “chain-of-thought,” I could see it (ChatGPT), still in the staging area, “thinking” things such as “All right, I must now assume the Petunio persona. Be verbose. Be flamboyant.” As a result, the charade was too obvious and it stopped being fun. I wanted to play at believing in Santa and I couldn't any longer, so I ceased using them and now they are no more.

Crumb 1500A New Kind of Wealth Is in Peril

The rich never have liked it when the hoi polloi get to do things that were so far out of their reach, like flying everywhere, because Capitalism ends up “affordabilizing” most things when not disrupted by oligarchs or politicians. Now the intellectually endowed and the highly literate hate ChatGPT with great passion for similar reasons.
